Question 1:

It would be helpful for us to understand the surveys that have been undertaken to date so that we can appreciate the nature of data collected (eg., quantitative data, qualitative data, general topics etc.) and what format the data is in (eg., paper or digital). is there any way in which we might be able to see an example of the data collected, or even a description?

Response:

As part of the trial of an impacts' assessment methodology, data will be sourced from semi-structured household and focus group interviews focused on aspects of livelihood and energy use, preparedness, public health, awareness of changes to climate and environment.

The set of social surveys are uploaded onto an open-source Kobo Toolbox app for ease of managing survey data both offline and remote access by project team here at SPREP. Therefore, much of the survey data will be digital.

Field measurement data from site observations, monitoring efforts will be shared digitally either with scans of result sheets or entered directly to a results tracker.
